Plot 5. Row E. Grave 20

In November 2005, my brother Michael, my husband Richard and I visited Egypt to see our Fathers grave, 60 years after his death. The experience was very moving. The cemetery is so beautifully kept, it is quite small compared to most and is situated next to a school for younger children, so there is laughter and singing at certain times of the day, which was lovely. The grounds are very well kept and very green, just like home, where as the surrounding area is all sand. As soon as you walk in the gates it is peaceful.

We went through MISR Travel via the Commonwealth War Graves Commission and they couldn't have been more helpful, so everything went very smoothly. The cemetery was not on a tourist route.

We were very pleased that we were able to go and the memory will stay with us always.
